Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method for forming an integrated semiconductor device and semiconductor device, more particularly to a method for forming a gate insulating layer in an integrated semiconductor device, and semiconductor device fabricated by the method. 2. Description of the Related Art When a gate insulating layer is formed on a substrate, layers of polysilicon, silicon nitride, silicon oxide and the like are used. Among these polysilicon, silicon nitride, silicon oxide and the like, some have a high dielectric constant, and hence, when they are used as the gate insulating layer, their thickness is controlled to be thin. In such a case, a problem arises that, when a current flows through the channel layer formed below the gate insulating layer during operation, the thickness of the gate insulating layer varies depending on an electrical field acting on it (this thickness will be referred to as a variation coefficient below). In other words, when the electrical field acting on the gate insulating layer is weak, the gate insulating layer has almost the same thickness as that in its initial state. In this case, however, since the variation coefficient of the thickness of the gate insulating layer is large, the potential of the gate insulating layer is not able to be controlled. Generally, in order to avoid this problem, a unit of a fabrication process comprising the formation of an oxide film is selected to be small. However, there is a problem that, when a large unit of a fabrication process is used, the variation coefficient of the thickness of the gate insulating layer becomes large. When a variation coefficient of the thickness of the gate insulating layer is large, an interface state between the gate insulating layer and the substrate increases, so that the mobility of a channel carrier decreases. Further, there is a problem that a leak current becomes larger, and the electron trap in the gate insulating layer increases. In the prior art, a multi-step process of forming a gate insulating layer having a uniform thickness and reducing the thickness variation coefficient by using an oxide film having a comparatively small thickness as a mask for forming an insulating layer has been proposed (for example, Jpn. Pat. Appln. KOKAI Publication No. 2-140133). In the structure disclosed in the prior art, the thickness variation coefficient of the gate insulating layer can be remarkably reduced by using an oxide film having a thickness of not more than 10 nm as a mask for forming an insulating layer. However, in the prior art, when the thickness of the oxide film is reduced, the thickness of the silicon substrate also becomes thin in the course of the forming of the oxide film, whereby a problem arises that a contact with the silicon substrate becomes incomplete, and a leak current increases. Real domestic tips on how to make a cucumber from scratch How to make a cucumber from scratch Farmers In United States, especially in California, are producing cucumbers in very large quantity. There are hundreds of varieties of cucumbers that are grown in United States. The first variety of cucumbers are grown in Alabama, and they are known as sweet, lemon-shaped, white ones. These cucumbers have been grown in United States since they were very small and have grown until they are full-grown cucumbers.
